

Another Binance senior executive resigned!

Colin Wu, a Chinese digital currency journalist, tweeted that Bill Qian, Chairman of Binance Labs, has resigned. Bill Qian joined Binance Labs in March 2020 and all of the significant investments the company has made are tied to his leadership. Recently, a representative for Binance confirmed the departure of Bill Qian, saying: Binance has a policy of not commenting on people's actions. We can confirm that Bill is quitting Binance for personal reasons. Previously, Binance Labs' executive director, Nicole Zhang also resigned from the company, according to her LinkedIn page. Nicole Zhang's resignation was verified by another Binance spokesman. Ms. Zhang joined Binance Labs as its executive director in April 2020, according to her LinkedIn page. She is now a partner with the financial technology venture capital company Lingfeng Capital, leading its Innovation Fund. Following the resignations of two key figures, Binance Labs is temporarily led by Ken Li, Harvard graduate and BCG alumni.
